The Story of Smartshake

Let’s go all the way back to 2008. On a bright Swedish morning, soon-to-be Smartshake founder Mikael Bergström grabbed a shaker, filled it with milk and protein powder, and went out to his car. Already a busy man, he was used to being in a hurry, and some days just didn’t make time for anything more than a liquid breakfast. As he started to shake his cup while driving, the lid flew off and he found himself covered in protein slurry. Not the best way to start your day, but this story has a different ending.

Luckily for us, Mikael didn’t just clean up and continue his day. He started thinking. If this happened to him, it surely must have happened to many others. He imagined a new breed of leak-proof shakers made from high quality materials. Then he added revolutionary features like attachable storage compartments to end the messy business of mixing your drinks from a bunch of different little plastic bags. And that was when Smartshake was born. So, here’s to the old shaker with the crappy lid. Thanks for the inspiration!

More style, less impact

EcoBottle is made from sugar cane biomass which otherwise would become waste, and manufactured with 100% renewable electricity. This means that the Carbon footprint for the manufacturing process is close to zero – which really is positive. Fill it with tap water and you'll be saving at least 300 times the energy compared to buying bottled water. We think it's a big deal.
