Africa Yearbook Volume 21

Politics, Economy and Society South of the Sahara in 2024

Edited by Seidu M. Alidu, University of Ghana, Benedikt Kamski, Arnold-Bergstraesser-Institut, Freiburg, Andreas Mehler, Arnold-Bergstraesser-Institut, Freiburg, and David Sebudubudu, University of Botswana

The Africa Yearbook covers major domestic political developments, the foreign policy and socio-economic trends in sub-Saharan Africa – all related to developments in one calendar year. The Yearbook contains articles on all sub-Saharan states, each of the four sub-regions (West, Central, Eastern, Southern Africa) focusing on major cross-border developments and sub-regional organizations as well as one article on continental developments and one on African-European relations. While the articles have thorough academic quality, the Yearbook is mainly oriented to the requirements of a large range of target groups: students, politicians, diplomats, administrators, journalists, teachers, practitioners in the field of development aid as well as business people.

READERSHIP: Students, politicians, diplomats, administrators, journalists, teachers, practitioners in the field of development aid as well as business people.

The Veintena Ceremonies in the Work of Sahagún Image, Ritual and Text

Patrizia Granziera, Universidad Autónoma del Estado de Morelos

This book provides the reader with an historical and visual information of the monthly Aztec feasts that will help him to envision these impressive religious celebrations. For the first time, a Mexican artist illustrates the veintenas like a tlacuilo (native painter) in pre-Conquest times.

The novelty of this book format (which includes an academic study of the veintenas festivals and twenty-six colourful illustrations of these festivals) make it appealing to anthropologists, art historians, ethnologists, scholars of religious studies, and the general public.

READERSHIP: Academic specialists on Mesoamerican Studies from different disciplines such as anthropology, art history, ethnology, and religious studies and other educated readers with an interest in the Aztec culture of Mexico. Keywords: Mexico, Aztecs, rituals, New Spain, codex, colonial, celebrations, Mexica, evangelization, pre-Hispanic, manuscripts, tlacuilo, evangelization, Franciscans, Aztec religion.

Seeing What Is Not There

Figuring the Anarchive

Carine Zaayman, Research Center
for Material Culture (RCMC), Wereldmuseum

Guarino Guarini was not only one of the most prominent Baroque architects but also published treatises on philosophy, mathematics and astronomy. The book explores the impact of his philosophical views on his views on architecture.

READERSHIP: Academic institutions, scholars and post-graduate students working in the fields of architectural history, art history, history of science and history of philosophy.

In the early eighteenth century, a generation of collectors in France and the Holy German Empire developed new principles for the display of paintings based on comparison of a mixture of schools and periods, to encourage conversation and develop connoisseurship.

READERSHIP: Scholars in eighteenth-century studies, history of art collecting, history of art theory, architectural history. Academic institutes, libraries, museums.

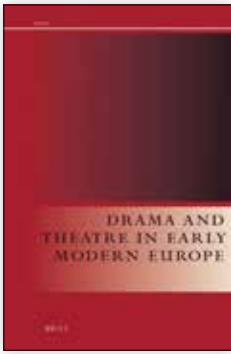

Via a serious grappling with the anarchive, or the absolute absences in the archives associated with Krotoa and Anne Barnard, Zaayman unsettles the hold that colonial archives would hold over our connection to the past and its people.

READERSHIP: Scholars, students and artists attentive to the dynamics of representation, and anyone interested in (Dutch) colonial history and its afterlives, could find this book of value.

Motifs in Art as Agents of Meaning

Arthur Crucq, Leiden University

Departing from a metaphorical comparison by Renaissance architect Leon Battista Alberti between the underlying principles of drawing and weaving, this book will show how seemingly abstract motifs in their realization already acquire the potential to refer to content. This opens a new perspective on the so-called distinction between 'abstract' and 'representational' and the extent to which various motifs in art can be regarded as representations. Based on recent insights from the fields of anthropology, archaeology, psychology and semiotics, it will furthermore become clear how the essentially abstract elements of art motifs can set in motion processes of meaning-making and as such function as agents, which implicitly emphasize that abstraction exactly shows how representation works.

READERSHIP: Academic institutes, libraries, lecturers, specialists and students in art, anthropology, archaeology, linguistics, philosophy, psychology and semiotics; art academies and visual artists; art teachers.

Empire of Improvisation Taxation and Governance in Colonial Indonesia

Maarten Manse,
Linnaeus University

This book reveals the everyday realities of Dutch colonial governance in Indonesia through the practice of taxation. Revealing its improvisational and manipulable nature, it challenges deeply-engrained ideas about top-down colonial rule, demonstrating how local actors were both affected by and reshaped colonial tax policy and practice from within.

READERSHIP: The book appeals to historians, anthropologists, and political scientists specialized in Southeast Asia. It is essential for scholars studying colonialism in Indonesia and the socio-political, -legal, and fiscal aspects of colonial empires.

Wordplay on Proper Names in Luke-Acts

Steve Reece, Saint Olaf College

This monograph is an exploration of two types of wordplay on proper names in Luke-Acts: the so-called "speaking name," and the so-called figura etymologica or paronomasia. Twenty-two names in Luke-Acts are identified in the first category, eighteen in the second.

READERSHIP: This monograph is directed primarily toward scholars and students of the New Testament, but it should be of interest to anyone wishing to consider Luke-Acts as a work of literature.

The Great Book of the World

The Formation and Use of the Library of Robert Ashley (1565–1641)

Renae Satterley, The Honourable Society of the Middle Temple

Robert Ashley, bibliophile, lawyer, and translator, amassed one of the largest personal libraries of the early modern period. Containing more than 6,000 titles, in 1641 it became the foundation of the library at Middle Temple, one of London's four Inns of Court. Ashley's library is notable for its extensive annotations, and unique items, including the only known copies of Albrecht Durer's sixteenth-century star maps and the first Belarusian language primer. Compiled by the current custodian of the library, this is the first comprehensive study of Ashley's library, and includes over 100 illustrations, and access to a full catalogue of it.

READERSHIP: This book will be of interest to those who study book and library history, manuscript culture, marginalia, and translations of the early modern period. Libraries with history and humanities collections will find it a useful addition. Keywords: Library history, private libraries, Inns of Court, early modern, Renaissance, London, Oxford, Neo-Latin, library catalogues, Middle Temple, manuscripts, translation studies, translations, book trade, printing, England, honour, honor, marginalia, annotations, paratexts.

From Byzantium to the Early Greek Enlightenment

Books, Writers, and Ideologies in Early Modern Greek Contexts (Late 15th – Early 18th Centuries)

Panagiotis Roilos, Harvard University

This book explores early modern Greek literary and wider cultural production and its connections with different traditions and socio-cultural or political networks in the multicultural milieus where it emerged and circulated, especially in parts of the Greek world under Venetian and Ottoman rules, or in major centers of the Greek diaspora across Western Europe. Particular emphasis is placed on scholarly debates about issues of historical and cultural continuities and discontinuities; the transition from manuscript production and circulation to print networks; and the negotiation of ethnic and cultural ideologies and broader mentalities as articulated in representative, but not necessarily 'canonical,' works of the period.

READERSHIP: Scholars and advanced students in Hellenic Studies, classical reception studies, the history of the book, comparative literature, and early modern European intellectual history. Keywords are: Byzantium, Classical tradition, book history, early modern Greek culture, European intellectual history, Cretan Renaissance, Jewish studies, Venetian culture, classical reception studies.

Regulae Iuris in the Medieval and Modern Age

Essential Stability vs. Evolving Contexts
Ilya A. Kotlyar

This volume is an anthology that addresses the regulae iuris, or maxims of law, using a uniform methodology. It approaches the regulae iuris as a dynamic system with an ever-evolving structure. In this respect, it goes beyond the narrow confines of the history of legal thought, placing the crystallisation and evolution of legal rules within a history of ideas.

READERSHIP: This book is aimed primarily at legal historians, legal theorists, historians of philosophy, and historians of language, grammar and rhetoric with an interest in different historical periods (from Antiquity to the nineteenth century).

Politics and Military Administration in the Portuguese Atlantic World

Miguel Dantas da Cruz, Universidade de Lisboa

Once seen as an ultra-centralized structure, the Portuguese empire is now often portrayed as a headless entity, coaxed into action by restless overseas subjects. This book proposes a more nuanced approach. Through an in-depth analysis of imperial management structures and practices, this book shows that the military administration of Brazil rested on agreements with colonial polities: the Luso-Dutch war consolidated, for example, an extreme version of municipal autonomy.

READERSHIP: The book is mainly written for scholars, researchers, and graduate students, but is also of interest for a wider public who wants to know more about early modern empires.

War Violence in the Pre-Modern World

Edited by Lennart Gilhaus,
Humboldt University of Berlin

Physical violence lies at the core of war. This volume explores the diverse manifestations of violence in pre-modern societies, from the trophy heads of the pre-Hispanic Andes to the tactics of Mongol conquerors in Central Asia and the battlefields of medieval Europe. Adopting a global historical perspective, it examines how war violence was perceived across different cultures and identifies potential cross-cultural patterns in its use and understanding.

Das Theologieverständnis Alberts des Großen als Ausdruck dominikanischer Zielsetzungen

Valerio Bonanno,
University of Cologne

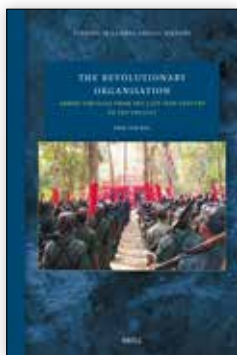

In this book, Valerio Bonanno describes how Albert the Great's theological model intertwines academic theology with pastoral activity. By analyzing the key role of Titus 1:9 in Albert's theological works, he highlights the multidimensional nature of the Albertine theology model and its profound connection to the core mission of the Dominican Order.

A Companion to Rome (c. 400–1050)

Caroline Goodson, University of Cambridge, and Julia Hillner, University of Bonn

This volume drastically refocuses our attention on Rome's inhabitants, their identities, relationships, institutions, experiences, agencies, and spaces, and on how these local aspects interacted with the city's universal character. It also bridges two periods of Rome that are typically separated, namely late antiquity and the early Middle Ages. Through collaborative authorship of thematic essays, it integrates Anglophone discourses and approaches to Rome by scholars from Italian as well as other European traditions.

READERSHIP: This volume will be especially relevant to students, researchers, and an educated public with an interest in the history of the city of Rome, archaeology, art history, the history of religions & theology, and urban studies.

Toward a Global History of Soil Sciences, Practices, and Materialities, 1300–1750

Edited by Justin Niermeier-Dohoney, Florida Institute of Technology, and Aleksandar Shopov, SUNY Binghamton

Toward a Global History of Soil unearths material expertise about soil in the early modern world that has remained largely unexamined outside of the study of agricultural history. Its eleven chapters reveal how experimental investigations transformed the economics of land administration, the treatment of disease, and hydraulic engineering.

New methodologies to evaluate the productive qualities of soil led to radical changes in medicine, chemistry, botany, and household management. This book is the first to examine how the emergence of practical, systematic attempts to understand the nature of soil contributed to the development of early modern sciences.

Reimagining Reparations in Human Rights

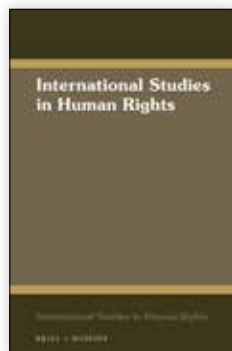

The Evolving Concept of Reparations in International Human Rights Law

Edited by Otto Spijkers,
Leiden University College,
Iakovos Iakovidis, Embassy of
Greece, Pierre Thielbörger,
Ruhr-University Bochum, and
Elena Abrusci, Brunel Law School

This edited volume explores the evolution of reparations in human rights law, looking at new forms of redress, victim and survivor-centred approaches, non-Western perspectives, and a broadening of what “reparation” can mean, from financial compensation to symbolic, environmental, and relational forms.

READERSHIP: Universities, scholars, and libraries in socio-legal work; governments, public and private entities dealing with reparations; practitioners and litigators endeavoring to hold institutions and States responsible for past and ongoing wrongs.

The Laws of Yesterday's Wars 4

From Mesopotamia to Somalia

Edited by Samuel White, National University of Singapore

How international is international humanitarian law? The Laws of Yesterday's Wars 4: From Mesopotamia to Somalia, together with its companion volumes, attempts to answer that question. It offers a culture-by-culture account of various unique restrictions placed on warfare over time. Containing essays by a range of laws of war academics and practitioners, it approaches the laws of yesterday's wars from a wide cross-section of history and culture, seeking to find any common ground and to demonstrate a history of international law outside the usual confines of its 'development' by Europeans and its later 'contributions.'

Special Judicial Mechanism for the Crime of Aggression Committed against Ukraine

Pavel Šturma, Charles University, and Milan Lipovský,
Charles University

This book offers the first comprehensive study of the history and practice of Assembly of States Parties, revealing its decisive role in governing the International Criminal Court and shaping the global justice system between 2002 and 2021.

The book analyzes the role of State parties in the interpretation of the Rome Statute when there is a permanent court, the International Criminal Court, and the possible overlap and consequential tension the shared interpretive roles have created and may potentially create.

The book addresses critical international legal issues related to the creation of the Special Tribunal for the Crime of Aggression Committed against Ukraine that was endorsed after debates within the Core Group taking place between 2022 and 2025.

READERSHIP: This book is essential for academic libraries, post-graduate students, legal scholars, diplomats, and practitioners in international law, human rights, political science, and global governance focused on international courts and institutions.

READERSHIP: This book would be of immediate relevance to academics, students and researchers in public international law generally and international criminal law, judges of the International Criminal Court and the ICJ, and State Parties to the Rome Statute.

READERSHIP: Considering the highly up-to-date topic, it would be interesting not only for states, universities, and general libraries, but also for international organizations, the tribunal itself including.

The Companion to the European Convention on Human Rights

Kushtrim Istrefi, Utrecht University, Zane Ratniece, Eurojust, and Kresimir Kamber, Council of Europe

Over time the corpus of rights and obligations under the European Convention on Human Rights has developed into and is perhaps best understood as a system of autonomous concepts, with the European Court of Human Rights acting as its master of conceptualisation. The Companion to the European Convention on Human Rights seeks to identify and explain what these concepts are, how they have evolved, and how they have been applied by the Court. The Companion presents the first compilation and analysis of nearly 300 ECHR notions on Convention rights, principles, procedures and institutions.

READERSHIP: The purpose of this book is to assist academics, judges and practitioners who specialise in the Convention and may require a trusted guide to specific notions which they encounter in their work. It is also designed to serve newcomers to the ECHR, such as students or public authorities, as a companion in their journey toward acquiring general or specialised knowledge in this area.

Preámbulo a la Conversión de los Moros o Catecismo de Moros

Preface to the conversion of the Moors or The Moorish Catechism attributed to Juan de Almarza, S.J. (1619–1669)

Youssef El Alaoui, Université de Rouen Normandie - ERIAC

Preámbulo a la Conversión de los Moros is the draft of a Jesuit refutation of Islam from the second half of the seventeenth century, written in the spirit of Ignatian spiritual conquest. This critical genetic edition allows readers to trace the author's sources and follow the development of his knowledge and perception of Muhammad, Islam, and Muslims—understood not only as a religious challenge but also as a political threat and a form of subversion. Though his image of Islam is largely second-hand and shaped by the history of the Moriscos, it also draws on missionary encounters with Muslim captives, which lead him to temper his polemical tone and offer a distinctive vision of a world that remained, in many respects, unknown.

READERSHIP: Specialists in early modern religious history, Jesuit studies, Islamic-Christian polemics, and manuscript culture; academic libraries; scholars and postgraduate students in early modern Iberian, colonial, and missionary studies.

The Slavic Verb

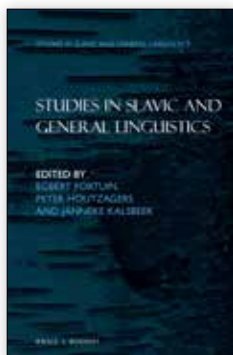

Part 2: Language-Specific Perspectives

Edited by Jaap Kamphuis, Leiden University, Egbert Fortuin, Leiden University, and
Simeon Dekker, Justus Liebig University, Giessen

Both general linguists and Slavic specialists will find the Slavic verb to be a rich source of linguistic data. Its study offers insights that contribute to a deeper understanding of the Slavic languages and of language more broadly. The second volume of this two-part work compiles language-specific studies on the Slavic verb, featuring articles on secondary imperfectives, the aspectual behavior of simplex verbs, habituality, relative tense, and perfective verbs of returning.

READERSHIP: This book will be of interest to scholars working on verbal systems in general and the Slavic verb in particular, as well as to students of Slavic languages and university libraries.

Spanish Drama on the Dutch Stage

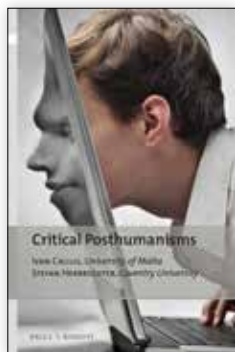

Transgressive Emotions in the Seventeenth Century

Tim Vergeer,
University of Amsterdam

Examining historical play performances and texts, Spanish Drama on the Dutch Stage demonstrates that seventeenth-century Dutch adaptations of comedia nueva were immensely popular because they offered outlets for vivid emotional, social, and sexual transgressions of the audience's rigid cultural norms.

READERSHIP: Specialists, students, and libraries in the fields of Renaissance & early modern studies, Dutch studies, Hispanic studies, theatre studies, literary studies, and translation studies; theatre-goers and theatre-makers.

Memory Studies in the Nordic Countries: A Handbook

Edited by Gunnþórunn Guðmundsdóttir and Ulla Savolainen

This peer-reviewed international handbook focuses on memory studies in the Nordic countries. It is a multi-disciplinary and transnational work that explores and maps characteristics and applications of the fast-growing field of memory studies in the Nordic region and in relation to the global context. With contributions focusing on theoretical and disciplinary reflections, illustrative thematic overviews, as well as elaborations of concepts and approaches in the Nordic setting, the handbook serves as a multi-disciplinary reference guide for researchers and students interested in memory studies. Existing and emerging debates have been carefully mapped, as well as disciplinary trajectories of the field, thematic, pragmatic, aesthetic, and ideological features of Nordic memory cultures. This comprehensive handbook of memory studies in the Nordic countries provides a stepping stone for future developments in the field.

READERSHIP: Universities offering programs in Memory Studies, Area studies (especially Scandinavian/Finnish Studies, European Studies), Cultural Studies, Literature Studies, Film and Theater Studies, Folklore Studies, Ethnology, Gender Studies, Indigenous Studies, History, Postcolonial Studies.

Ashura as Submission and Rebellion

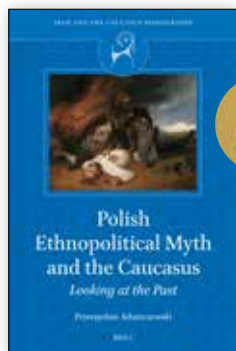

An Ethnography on Shia Rituals in Contemporary Iran

Kenichi Tani, National Museum of Ethnology

An ethnography of Hossein's mourning rituals in contemporary Iran, this book explores how the bodily dimensions of the ritual occasionally manifest excesses that exceed obedience to the authoritarian regime. Through participatory observation, the author vividly captures the ritual's inherent ambiguity—a space where governance and resistance are in constant tension.

Polish ethnopolitical myth and the Caucasus

Looking at the past

Przemysław Adamczewski, Polish Academy of Sciences

Does the fact that we dislike someone influence our perception of the world? If Poles consider Russians as “historical” enemies, does this affect how they interpret the present and the past? The author argues this is indeed the case. In his book, the author illustrates this through the example of the Caucasus, primarily in the context of the nineteenth century, when the modern Polish nation was being formed. How did the Polish independence emigration view the independence struggles of the Caucasian peoples? And how do contemporary Polish researchers and publicists approach the issue? Where does Russia fit into all of this? The author seeks to answer these and many other questions in his account about an imagined Polish-Caucasian comradeship.

READERSHIP: The book will certainly be interesting for students and academics dealing with Slavic and Caucasian studies, primarily in the context of historical and literary research.

Descartes: The Story of a Mind

Gianluca Mori, University of Eastern Piedmont (UPO), Italy

Descartes: The Story of a Mind offers a historically and philosophically nuanced reconstruction of Descartes's evolving thought, challenging static labels by foregrounding intellectual uncertainty, interlocutory dynamics, and the provisional, context-sensitive character of Cartesian metaphysics, science, and ethics.

READERSHIP: This book is of interest to scholars and advanced students of Early Modern Philosophy, particularly those engaged with Descartes, the History of Metaphysics, and the development of scientific thought.

Locality of Reason

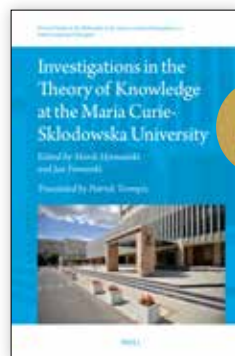

Introducing Locality into the Debates on Reason and Rationality

Edited by Lara Scaglia,
Michał Dobrzański,
Adam Klewenhagen,
Wojciech Kozyra and
Marcin Poręba

The book contributes to the researches in social philosophy, metaphysics, ontology and epistemology by introducing the notion of locality of reason in order to challenge the dualism between, on the one hand, the apologists of the absolute value of reason and, on the other hand, relativism and historicism.

READERSHIP: This book targets researchers and students in philosophy (epistemology, metaphysics, social philosophy), social sciences, and history of ideas exploring notions of reason and rationality.

"Sense Is This Wonderful Word..." Hegel and the Aesthetic

Edited by Nicola Ramazzotto, Elena Romagnoli, and
Alberto L. Siani, University of Pisa

This edited volume aims to shed light on the presuppositions, developments and legacies of Hegel's concept of sense from a variety of perspectives, with a focus on the definition(s) of the aesthetic. The complexity of "sense" allows different dimensions of Hegel's concept of the aesthetic to emerge, also in relation to contemporary debates.

Teaching Religious Education

Challenges, Developments and Current Debates in Comparative Perspective

Edited by Maria Lucenti, University of Genoa

Historically, religious education has often been seen as a tool for reinforcing cultural and religious identity. However, as the world becomes more interconnected and religious diversity grows within national borders, RE has increasingly been called upon to play a different role—one that fosters understanding and peaceful co-existence among people of different faiths and worldviews. The volume Teaching Religious Education: Challenges, Developments, and Current Debates in Comparative Perspective delves into these complexities, offering a comprehensive exploration of how religious education is taught, debated, and implemented across a diverse range of countries, challenging the Eurocentric focus of much existing research on religious education.

READERSHIP: The main audience of the book are academics and experts in religious education, post-graduate and undergraduate students. The relevant subjects are religious education, intercultural education and history of education.

Anti-Jesuit Discourse in the Polish–Lithuanian Commonwealth (1576–1632)

Arguments, Tropes, Figures

Wojciech Ryczek, Jagiellonian University, Kraków

What do Jesuits have in common with spiders, flies, chameleons, owls, hawks, or Sirens? Rediscover provocative arguments, tropes, and figures that formed anti-Jesuit literature in the Polish–Lithuanian Commonwealth (1576–1632). This monograph examines the structure and functions of these discursive elements, often reinforced by vivid metaphor, elaborated allegory, or malicious irony, through the lens of rhetorical strategies suitable for controversy, polemic, dispute, or parody. Due to this dual focus, both structural and functional, it enables the identification of pivotal images, stereotypes, clichés, and legends associated with the Society. Many of them fuelled and continue to fuel anti-Jesuit sentiment worldwide.

READERSHIP: The book is essential for scholars and students of cultural and literary history, particularly those interested in early modern literature, Jesuit studies, discourses of propaganda, and religious polemics.

Histories

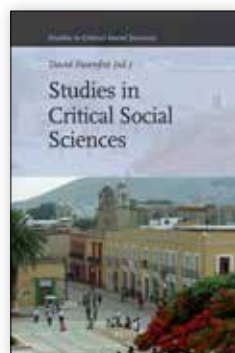

Ancient, Modern, Personal and Political

Tom Brass, Cambridge University

Histories examined here extend from the ancient to the modern, encompassing also the political and the personal. The efficacy of Marxist theory about class and much else besides is reasserted via an examination of how and why discourse about work, gender, and property relations features at the rural grassroots.

READERSHIP: This book is especially relevant to those interested in political economy and development studies, especially concerning discussions on the interplay between capitalism and culture.

Marxism and the Socialist Transition

Volume I: State, Power and Bureaucracy

Roberto Sáenz,

Translated by Ian Barnett

Last century, the workers made their revolution, smashed the capitalist state and began building their own—but were politically expropriated by the Stalinist bureaucracy. In this time of deeper capitalist crisis, we need radical conclusions to relaunch the socialist revolution in the 21st century.

READERSHIP: This book is intended for a broad audience: Marxian scholars, socialists seeking an explanation of what happened to the revolutions of the 20th century and what perspectives emerge from that history.

Living Utopia?

Stories from Rojava

Christopher Wimmer,

Institut für Bildung in der Informationsgesellschaft

The great achievement of this excellently researched and readable book is to provide a nuanced and empathetic view of the concrete situation in the Kurdish-dominated regions of North and East Syria, known as Rojava. For that, Christopher Wimmer has chosen a form of writing that oscillates between reportage, political analysis, and ethnographic investigation.

READERSHIP: The book is aimed at people interested in left-wing, grassroots democratic or libertarian ideas, including activists – especially those involved in social movements, feminist politics or ecological issues.

Poetics of Value

*The Primacy of Insurgency
as Marxist Methodology*

Elliot Mason

Value-form theory understands the present as a process of homogenisation, commodifying all life-times. In Poetics of Value, Elliot C. Mason criticises this temporal imaginary by positing contemporary poetry as the exposure of different temporalities within and against the present.

READERSHIP: This book is particularly relevant to specialists in Marxism, especially those focused on value-form theory, graduate students in philosophy and literature, theorists of poetry, students of Marxism, scholars and students in black studies.

Take Back the Power

The Fall and Rise and Fall of NYC's Transport Workers Union

Marc Kagan

The fifty-year long neoliberal era has been marked by working-class reverses and moribund unions. Grounded in the author's own experiences as a transit worker participating in a decades-long effort to fight management and austerity economics, Take Back the Power presents a new perspective on what activists can do to revitalize the labor movement. Marc Kagan uses his union's story to illuminate key dilemmas their efforts face – among them: fight the boss or fight the union to fight the boss; the tension between leadership and participatory democracy; and the costs and benefits of risk aversion. Take Back the Power encourages us to think introspectively about the choices we make as we attempt to build a better world.

READERSHIP: This book is especially relevant for union education and training programs, university courses focused on labor, employment relations, organizational studies, economics, political science, sociology, and history. It will also appeal to union and social movement activists, as well as enthusiasts of New York City and mass transit.
