Halkidiki is not merely a holiday destination; it is an unrivalled summer and winter experience, the place you have long dreamt of.

Halkidiki Abundant green landscapes under a golden sun, beaches of immaculate beauty, a tantalising blend of sea and mountains, traditional colours, historical landmarks, rich culinary and cultural treasures, all form the striking mosaic that is Halkidiki.

One of its biggest assets is the unmatched quality of hospitality offered, made up of an extensive network of hotels, ranging from modern units with state-of-the-art conference rooms, spa facilities, marinas and golf, to eco-friendly, traditional hotels, all in very close proximity to the international airport of Thessaloniki, the second largest city in Greece.

The Halkidiki peninsula is further divided into three smaller peninsulas: Kassandra, Sithonia and Athos.

An exciting, ancient story unravels before a visitor's eyes through the numerous historical monuments scattered around Halkidiki. The findings in the Cave of Petralona reveal that the area has been inhabited for over 700,000 years, while archaeological finds show that organized communities in the area date back to 4,000 B.C.

Immerse Yourself in History

During the 8th century B.C., a large migration from the city of Halkidiki gives the peninsula its name. At the end of the same century, the 32 cities of Halkidiki unite under the leadership of the city of Olynthos, and in 348 B.C., Halkidiki becomes part of King Philip's Kingdom of Macedonia. During the Hellenistic age the three big cities of Halkidiki are founded: Kassandreia and Ouranoupolis in 315 B.C. and Antigoneia in 280 B.C. In 168 B.C. the Romans seize control of the area. During the Christian centuries, Halkidiki is raided by the Goths, the Huns and the Catalans. After the 9th century A.D., the monks of Mount Athos gain control of most of Halkidiki, while in 1430 the Turks conquer the area. After two unsuccessful rebellions against them, in 1821 and 1854, the people of Halkidiki gain their much desired freedom in October 1912.

Stunningly scenic, densely covered in green and with an excellent tourism infrastructure, Halkidiki is the ideal getaway in which to unwind, but also where the more adventurous spirit can discover unique places of exceptional interest and beauty.

Entering Halkidiki, one comes upon the famous Petralona Cave, the history of which begins in the Paleolithic Era. Continuing past the beautiful beaches of Kallikrateia, one enters the first peninsula of Halkidiki, Kassandra, and is greeted by the Byzantine tower of the Stavronikita Monastery of Mount Athos and the baths of Agia Paraskevi. According to Greek mythology, in Kassandra, also called Pallini, among the endless, striking sandy beaches, the mythical battle of the Giants took place.

The next stop is Sithonia, the second peninsula and home to the ancient city of Olynthos, with its exquisite mosaic inlays and archaeological site. Sithonia is characterised by breath-taking beaches and an abundance of pine trees; on its east coastline one may marvel at the sight of the sun rising behind impressive Mount Athos across.

Live a thousand and one experiences

From Sithonia, one can either choose to head for the coolness and shade of leafy Mount Holomondas, a little to the north, or continue on to meet the Athos peninsula further east - the biggest part of which is run by the Monastic State of Agio Oros, "The Holy Mountain" - where entry to women is forbidden. The part of the Athos peninsula that is free for all to enter is generous with its beauty: one may visit its dreamy beaches, follow Aristotle's footsteps in Stagira, the philosopher's birthplace, relax at the aquarium of Ierissos or observe the "kamagia", the shipyards, where to this day, traditional methods in the manufacturing of wooden ships are employed.

Halkidiki's culinary identity is a tradition of flavours, smells, ingredients and techniques that began in antiquity, with numerous festivals in honour of the earth and the goods it provided to the ancient peoples.

Taste Unending Flavours

When considering the Halkidiki diet, olive oil and the green olive first come to mind. Then, honey – they say Aristotle loved it – that is collected from ecosystems almost untouched by man. In Halkidiki, some of the best Greek wine and tsipouro is distilled, from the most distinguished varieties of vines, usually with traditional techniques. The Halkidiki wines have a strong body, full of flavour. Red wines have a distinct dark ruby colour while white wines are clear and bright. There are excellent wine producers whose facilities you can visit, in order to taste the wines and get initiated into the ancient art of its creation. In November, pots fill with grapes and boil twice, spreading the smell of aniseed, which flavours the tsipouro of the Macedonia region, as well as "Montovina", the hot drink made from tsipouro and honey. In Halkidiki's dairy farms, excellent cheeses are produced, the quality of which is based on Greek milk from a selection of free-range herds, as well as in the pride and love the producers pour into their work, dedicating their skills to creating traditional produce such as feta, agiotiri, goat's cheese and yogurt, as well as butter. And when your palate longs for a different kind of culinary exploration, Halkidiki can satisfy that too, as, in the last decade, prominent chefs from all over the globe come to Halkidiki to offer their creations in exquisite gourmet restaurants and festivals.

You will feel the cultural heart of Greece strongly beating in Halkidiki.

The visitor can choose from a range of dozens of traditional festivals in villages, in big, imposing churches or smaller countryside ones, to modern, international festivals such as the ones in Kassandra and Siviri, Afytos, Nea Fokea and Polygyros, the Festival of the Sea, Sani Festival and Porto Carras Festival – which focus on the magic of music, but also incorporate the visual arts, theatre, cinema and other events in order to promote culture, diversity, quality and respect to artistic creation. All these take place in a stunning natural landscape, which combines the serenity of the sea and the mesmerizing mountains, with facilities that can support any wish and need for the spirit, the mind, the body.

Move to the Rhythm of Life

You don't have to know that Halkidiki boasts the biggest number of EU Blue Flags than any other tourist prefecture in Greece in order to appreciate the beauty of its beaches, that span over 500 kilometres of coastline.

Escape into the blue

From the beaches of Kassandra, with their emerald waters and endless stretches of sand, to the secret beaches of Sithonia, where the sea flirts with a stunning landscape of white sand and densely green trees, to the Athos peninsula, where the scent of the pine trees and the salt of the sea create ideal conditions for true relaxation and meditation and the branches of the trees reach into the sea, creating one of the most beautiful sights in the world, wherever you may be in Halkidiki, whatever you may be after –entertainment or tranquility– you are bound to find it.

Even when your heart longs for something different, even more unique and private, small pathways will lead you to hundreds of beautiful beaches, large or small, gulfs of turquoise waters and beautiful undersea landscapes; your own, personal hideaways.

Discover Uniqueness

In order to visit the Athonic State, a strict protocol is observed: no more than 120 visitors are allowed every day, which means that you have to contact the Pilgrim Office in Thessaloniki or Ouranoupolis for a permit before your arrival. Your stay – no more than four days – in the monasteries is free of charge. It is forbidden for women to enter the Athos Peninsula, the place the monks call "The Garden of the Virgin".

Here, visitors follow the monks' way of life, immersed in tranquil silence, only interrupted by the sound of bells and imposing chants. Its natural, unspoiled beauty and a series of invaluable artifacts of Christianity compose a moving, unique experience. Your watch will not be of use here, as everyone follows the solar time, as well as the Julian Calendar. Walking through serene paths, talking to the monks, fishing or taking part in the holy services, you will embark on an introspective journey of mystical proportions and find yourself at peace with life.

The most valuable keepsake from Mount Athos, together with the enlightening discussions with the monks, the liberating serenity of the scenery and the experience of a life out of the ordinary, will be the results of your own search for inner peace and wisdom.

The uniqueness of the natural landscape of Mt. Holomondas has led Greece to mark it as a Special Protection Zone and include it in the European Union's Natura 2000 network of environmental areas, highlighting its ecological importance.

Feel the Pulse of Nature

It is easy to understand why: its slopes are spotted with fir, beech, chestnut trees and perennial oaks, hidden springs and streams echo the sound of water, while the cleanliness of the air charges up every cell of one's body with energy and vitality. Discover an alternative, equally appealing side of Halkidiki by following the exciting hiking routes, not only on Holomondas but throughout the peninsula, under the rich shade of the trees, next to the beach or on the mountains.

If, on the other hand, you are after a more rigorous or adventurous sport, cycling routes – more than 17 – are waiting to time you in with the pulse of the earth and the breath of the wind, and diving centres waiting to guide you through underwater treasures. A number of sports tournaments also take place here, such as the crossing of the Toroneos Gulf - between Kassandra and Sithonia, where some of the most important athletes in endurance swimming from all over the world can be found competing - sailing races, as well as tennis and beach volleyball competitions. You can enjoy exploratory walking tours and horse-riding during your stay in modern or traditional lodgings.

What you can be sure of is that in the nature of Halkidiki, be it summer or winter, your spirit will awaken and bliss be redefined.
