SIGNATURE RITUALS AND TRADITIONS

AFTERNOON TEA

A cherished St. Regis tradition, inspired by Caroline Astor's 19th-century Manhattan salons, where afternoon tea welcomed the city's elite.

BLOODY MARY

Perfected in 1934 at the King Cole Bar, each St. Regis hotel crafts its own take. At The St. Regis Osaka, the Shogun Mary features soy sauce, yuzu, and wasabi for a bold Japanese twist.

BUTLER SERVICE

The hallmark of St. Regis hospitality—personalized, 24-hour butler service offering everything from unpacking to bespoke experiences, ensuring each guest's stay is flawlessly tailored.

A woman with voluminous red curly hair is seated on a light-colored, curved sofa. She is wearing a strapless, floor-length pink gown with multiple layers of ruffles. She holds a flute glass of champagne in her right hand. In the foreground, a dark wooden coffee table is elegantly set with a silver three-tiered tray of macarons and fruit, a silver teapot and cups, a vase of pink peonies, a vase of red flowers, and a golden bird figurine. The background features a large window with gold-colored frames and a side table with more silverware.
